

Aging and Dying In Place

A Community Panel Conversation

Thursday, October 20, 6 PM

The challenges and opportunities of Colorado's fast-growing aging population are beginning to transform our homes, communities, and health and economic systems. With the oldest Baby Boomers turning 70 this year, and expected to live longer and in overall better health than preceding generations, the issues facing older adults in the metro Denver area will become more pronounced and require more extensive and creative problem solving to meet their needs and the needs of entire communities.

Join Colorado VNA, the CU Division of Geriatrics, and experts from a variety of fields as we engage in a lively conversation about what it means to older adults and their families to age and die in place. The evening will be moderated by Chris Lee, President and CEO of Colorado VNA, and we will explore topics related to housing and development, transportation, technology, and senior healthcare.

Event located at Anschutz Medical Campus - Gossard Forum, Fulginiti Pavilion for BioEthics & Humanities 13080 E 19th Avenue
Aurora, CO 80045

Light refreshments will be served. Admission is free, but space is limited so please RSVP by calling 303-698-6308 or at www.VNAColorado.org/Speakers
